Bungee jumpers buy high bridge, plan reality TV show

Trestle to become tallest legal jump site in N. America

By Ben Carlson
News staff

Anderson County draws tens of thousands of visitors each year on a pilgrimage to walk the hallowed grounds of Kentucky's bourbon trail. It could soon be drawing pilgrims of a different sort — the kind who like to leap from very tall bridges.

Interested in jumping? Stardom?

Those with the courage to leap from Young's High Bridge could one day end up in a reality TV show titled "Join Us For Launch." For a chance to jump, those interested must send an e-mail to locals@vertigobungee.net. Jumpers must be in good physical condition and at least 18 years old. Vertigo Bungee will screen those who apply and determine which applicants are selected.

Young's High Bridge, the old train trestle that runs parallel to the S bridge over the Kentucky River in Tyrone, has been purchased by a group of investors intent on making Anderson County the premier destination for bungee jumpers, and perhaps the center of a reality TV show.

Lead by Springfield resident Mitch Morris, the investors purchased the bridge late last year and have already received a green light from zoning officials here to use it for recreational purposes.

Morris, general manager of Vertigo Bungee, said in an interview Friday that he still needs to clear several governmental hurdles before all of his plans materialize, plans which include creating a reality TV show featuring celebrities, extreme athletes and perhaps even the captains of industry.

On Friday, Morris finally, if not warily, broke his silence on the project, which has been brewing since last fall and could make Lawrenceburg one of the most famous bungee jumping locations in the world.

Anderson County school administrators have cause for celebration, as well as room for improvement, when it comes to examining the school district's EXPLORE and PLAN test results.

The Kentucky Department of Education recently released public school district scores for the pre-ACT assessments EXPLORE and PLAN, both tests used to predict the college and career-readiness of eighth and 10th graders.

TESTS

Eighth graders take the EXPLORE test, a curriculum-based exam that gives early indicators of college and career readiness, testing students on content areas such as English, math, reading and science.

At the same time, high school 10th graders complete the PLAN test, an exam used to predict a student's future success on the ACT, a college entrance test taken by every Kentucky junior public high school student.

Anderson County eighth graders exceeded EXPLORE benchmarks in every subject area for the 2012-2013 school year, increasing its English score by a whopping 15 percent from last year.

About 65.6 percent of Anderson County eighth graders met the test's English benchmark score of 13.

Despite the district's gains in the EXPLORE test, Anderson County eighth graders do lag a few percentage points behind the state's average scores for Kentucky eighth graders meeting or exceeding benchmarks.

"We recognize we're making some growth, but certainly we want to be leaders," Instructional Supervisor Sharon Jackman said when asked about the district's scores compared to the state's average. "We don't want to be behind."

Test results for this year's sophomore class are a little more mixed.

In English and math, 10th graders increased their PLAN scores by 10.1 percent and 3.6 percent, respectively. A total of 70.2 percent of 10th graders met benchmarks for English, the highest score for Anderson County since 2006.

But in meeting reading benchmarks, sophomore scores dropped by 0.8 percent from 2011. The average student score for reading, however, increased by 0.2 points.

Only about one in five sophomores met PLAN benchmarks for science, a decrease of 3 percent from last year.

Average student scores for science in the district also decreased slightly by one-tenth of a point.

Jackman said she was "elated" with the sophomores' jump in meeting English benchmarks and their improved composite score, which, according to Jackman, put the high school in the top 13 percent in the state.

But the district will be pinpointing those students who didn't fare as well on the science portion.

"We want to be competitive and make sure our students are performing well in science," Jackman said.

Both the EXPLORE and PLAN tests are heavily incorporated in the state's Unbridled Learning accountability model, which replaced the national assessment system No Child Left Behind starting in the 2011-2012 school year.

EXPLORE results for the district's middle school students are measured as part of overall state accountability for college and career-readiness.

At the high school level, the state measures the yearly growth of students' performance on the PLAN test to their performance on the ACT, basing individual percentile rankings on improvement in reading and math results.

The PLAN test also figures into the high school's overall achievement for the district's accountability.

"The PLAN is important to us because there's one piece in the PLAN on the English test, the language and mechanics, that goes to our accountability," Jackman said.

teen to a 17-year-old female's phone.

Tindal previously pleaded not guilty to all charges Jan. 31 in district court.

According to a warrant for his arrest, Tindal allegedly sent text messages to a female Anderson County student Jan. 27 and stated he was going to "choke the life out of her and watch last breath leave her body through his hands."

Tindal's messages also said "he will throw one of his pipe bombs through her window and shoot her through her window," according to the search warrant narrative, and that "he would go to the school and have another [expletive] Columbine."

Officer Nathan Doty, called as a witness by Anderson County Attorney Bobbi Jo Lewis, said Tindal waived his rights upon arrest and told police he sent the text messages because he was angry the 17-year-old girl was not texting him back, and that Tindal was angry with himself for sending the texts and "popping off at the mouth."

The alleged threats led to Tindal's arrest Jan. 28 and the search of Emma B. Ward Elementary and the Anderson County High School by local law enforcement and a Kentucky State Police K-9 unit.

Police officers were also stationed in the entrances of both school buildings as students came to school that Monday morning, according to Superintendent Sheila Mitchell.

Bond for Tindal was set at $10,000 cash.

Public defender Ashley Shouse, Tindal's attorney, asked District Court Judge David Hayse to revisit Tindal's bond agreement due to the emotional nature of the relationship between the 19-year-old Tindal and the 17-year-old female student, and her client's lack of violent criminal history.

"I think based on the circumstances $10,000 cash is excessive," Shouse said.

Judge Hayse denied Shouse's request to change the bond agreement, saying the nature of the case's allegations made Tindal "a danger to the community."

Tindal also has outstanding bench warrants in Jefferson and Shelby Counties, according to a Lawrenceburg city police report.

Tindal has also been ordered by the district court not to have any contact with the 17-year-old female or to be on school premises, according to the district court docket.

Trashed Lock Road property draws ire of fiscal court

Owner a no-show in district court

By Ben Carlson
News staff

A pile of junk and trash on Lock Road remains untouched a full year after the property's owner was put on notice that it had to be cleaned up. Frustrated with the lack of progress, the Anderson County Fiscal Court debated last Tuesday using county equipment to cleaning it up and placing a lien on the property, which is owned by Robin Sims of 100 Quachita Trail, Frankfort.

Sims was cited by the county's solid waste department last February and given 30 days to clean up the mess, which court documents say include trash, a stove, a couch, box springs and a mattress.

Sims didn't comply and the citation was forwarded to Anderson District Court, where a judge issued a summons for Sims to appear in October.

Sims, according to court records, did not appear and a warrant was issued for his arrest including a $250 bond.

Sims bonded out of jail but failed to appear in court in December. He was a no-show again in late January for hearing during which his bond was revoked.

During Tuesday fiscal court meeting, Magistrate David Ruggles expressed his frustration, saying the property is in his district and people frequently ask him why it is being taken care of.

Ruggles questioned if the fiscal court could simply use its loader and trucks to clean it up and place a lien on the property.

County Attorney Bobbi Jo Lewis said that could be done under an old solid waste ordinance, but no decision was made during Tuesday's meeting to do so.

Magistrates start process to do away with business, booze licenses

By Ben Carlson
News staff

Those thinking about purchasing a county business license might want to hold off a few weeks.

During its meeting last Tuesday, the Anderson County Fiscal Court took the first step in eliminating that license and others to become what Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway calls more "business friendly."

Magistrates unanimously approved a motion to have County Attorney Bobbi Jo Lewis draft an ordinance that would take off the books a license based on the number of people a business employs, as well as one required for stores that sell beer and liquor.

Once drafted, the ordinance would need two readings in separate fiscal court meetings and a majority vote of magistrates, meaning it won't like be approved until late March, and won't actually take effect until the end of June when business licenses are traditionally due.

The business license requirement generates around $70,000 in revenue to the county. Conway has said he's comfortable taking that revenue off the books.

Last Tuesday marked a continuation of a discussion to kill those licenses, which were derided by Magistrate David Ruggles as an unnecessary burden on local businesses.

"I've always been opposed to [these taxes]," Ruggles said. "I don't understand the logic of taxing someone just because they own a business. This is just another way to raise revenue and it's one less tax people should be paying."

"They already have to pay ridiculous taxes to the state."

Ruggles, who chairs the court's finance committee, said the county can do without the money for the time being and that the revenue would be made up down the road when property values recover and provide more real estate tax revenue.

The debate over business licenses came to a head several months ago, primarily over how to fairly enforce it with no full-time enforcement office. It is currently enforced by code enforcement officer Doug Ingram, who said a sweep he performed several months ago showed that roughly 40 percent of businesses he checked on US 127 Bypass had no county license.

Magistrates also heard numerous complaints from business owners who were unaware the requirement existed, then forced to pay hefty fines for not having one.

Ruggles said he also wants to do away with the liquor and beer license requirement, which hasn't been enforced since it was created in the early 1980s and requires $100 for businesses that sell packaged beer and $400 for those that sell liquor. Since 2010, only one retailer has purchased a license of the dozens that, by law, should.

Ruggles said while business licenses were obviously created to generate revenue, the beer and liquor license was not.

"That was a moral thing," Ruggles said. "A lot of people wanted to penalize them for going to buy beer and wine somewhere, which is another reason I wouldn't vote for that because I don't think we should legislate morality."

Magistrate Forest Dale Stevens questioned doing away with the liquor and beer licenses, saying that it might be the only way to get tax revenue from people he says don't otherwise pay.

"You stop at these stores that sell beer and they're owned by foreigners who don't pay taxes, anyway," Stevens said.

"So you want to tax people because they're immigrants?" Ruggles asked.

Stevens said no, adding that he is talking about not taxing what he called "local people."

"I'm not going to pick and choose if they're Pakistan, Muslim or Indian ... it doesn't work that way in my world. I want to get rid of all of [these taxes]."

Ruggles said he's heard arguments from local businesses that keeping the license requirement helps protect them from outsiders.

"That's restraint of trade," Ruggles said. "Let the free market dictate who people do business with. It doesn't matter if they're local or come from Timbuktu."

JUMP

'Augusta National of bungee jumping'

Morris is a bungee jumper and videographer who has captured the sport on film since it began in the early 1990s.

A native of Lexington, Morris fell in with a group of West Coast types who thought nothing of tying a bungee cord to their feet and leaping from the tallest structures they could find.

"We pre-date the California rage when everyone had a bungee company for a while," Morris said. "We've been featured in the New York Times, on MTV and on ESPN, and have jumped all over the world."

The group's website, vertigobungee.net, shows team members leaping from incredible locations, including the dizzying 952-foot drop into the Royal Gorge in Colorado.

Although it appears incredibly dangerous, Morris said bungee jumping from moderate heights such as Young's High Bridge isn't technically difficult.

"After about a 15-minute safety talk, you'd be good to go," Morris said. "It's actually more dangerous driving to a jump location than it is jumping."

Morris said he and his partners dreamed for decades of owning their own location after spending most of that time jumping from locations that weren't exactly legal.

"Let's put it this way ... we've been resourceful with our real estate choices," Morris said. "Oftentimes bungee jumping has been, well, trespassing."

Not anymore. The purchase of Young's High Bridge allows Vertigo Bungee a legal jumping home and, at 265 feet from deck to water, will be the highest legal bungee jumping location in North America, Morris said.

"It's the highest we're aware of, and we're more aware of jumping real estate in North America than anyone," he said.

Morris said public participation in Vertigo Bungee's efforts will be encouraged but the bridge will not be open to just anyone.

"This is going to be a club-based operation," Morris said. "Will there be membership opportunities? Yes, but this isn't going to be a carnival ride where you pay your money and jump."

"We're out to make this a world-class operation, which takes it out of the public realm. We want this to be the Augusta National of bungee jumping while still reaching out to the community here and the national community to share this resource."

Photo furnished

With Young's High Bridge looming behind them, Mitch Morris and his son work to construct a new deck on the 124-year-old rail trestle that connects Anderson and Woodford counties.

What will be publicly available is a zip line that, if approved, will allows users to wear a harness attached to a cable and zip over the river, perhaps even from one side to the other.

'Join Us For Launch'

Just because those interested in jumping can't just show up and do so, they still have a shot at leaping off the bridge and perhaps becoming a reality show star.

By e-mailing locals@vertigobungee.net, people here can be considered not only for club membership, but could one day appear in a reality TV show that will be based in Lawrenceburg and take jumpers all over the world.

Morris said his group is already working with a production company to make that happen, but plenty of wrinkles still need to be ironed out before anything is finalized.

"We're looking for people who have enough [guts] to jump off the bridge," Morris said. "They have to be athletic, able to take instruction and be at least 18."

"We want to start collecting local contacts in terms of people who want to audition for the reality show."

Morris said he has roughly 25 years of video showing Vertigo Bungee team members leaping from locations all over the world.

Initial plans have him releasing a 25th anniversary DVD, including the purchase of Young's High Bridge and its rehabilitation.

After that, he said he hopes to have two years of footage of people ranging from celebrities to locals experiencing bungee jumping, and use that footage to kick off a reality show in 2016.

"This is going to be a reality show about air sports," he said. "The working title is Join Us For Launch."

Plenty of work remains

Along with securing various permits and permission from state and local officials, Morris said the bridge itself needs some work before being used.

The bridge is 124 years old and has not been used for commercial rail traffic since 1985. Morris said the pilings and structure remains sound.

"It was designed for the weight of loaded freight trains," he said.

The bridge's previous owner had already removed the steel rails for scrap, leaving behind the railroad ties which, Morris said will be covered with treated lumber. He said plans also call to add a safety rail to the bridge.

Jumping is scheduled to begin over Kentucky Derby weekend, along with jumps on Memorial Day, the Fourth of July and Labor Day.

"We plan to have jumps during the busiest tourism weeks," Morris said. "We plan to have a variety of themes and sponsors that are a part of the film project."

Morris said the first time local jumpers are likely to participate will be over the Fourth of July.

Three politicians who shouldn't be re-elected

Anti-gun stance at odds with most Kentuckians

Column as I see 'em ...
We Kentuckians have been a fairly pious bunch in recent weeks, flaunting our frontiersmen and women attitudes as America's most populated cities and states wage war against the 2nd Amendment.
We snicker at New Yorkers and their goofy new gun laws, and mock Chicago as a perfect example of what happens when politicians strip away the rights of law-abiding citizens to defend themselves against gun-toting thugs.
In fact, while the rest of the country is working to get rid of guns, we're enacting laws that allow us to openly carry them just about anywhere we want, including nearly every public building in town.
Our message to America? Here in Kentucky we love our guns and you meddling outsiders best keep your unconstitutional gun laws and opinions to yourselves.
Then along come three radical state legislators who are out to taint Kentucky's good name. A law they're proposing is so radical that about the only good thing that could come from it is ridding Frankfort of them once and for all.
At least I certainly hope so.

Ben Carlson
Publisher

Meet state Rep. Jim Wayne (D-Louisville), state Rep. Mary Lou Marzian (D-Louisville) and state Sen. Kathy Stein (D-Lexington). This trio has introduced a bill that, among a bunch of other unconstitutional nonsense, would require legal gun owners to obtain a license for every gun they own. No, this isn't about the misnamed "assault weapons." This is about all guns, even old granddad's squirrel rifle tucked away in the attic.
Here's a little bio information on this bunch taken from their state legislature pages, none of which comes as a surprise.
Wayne's says he has a degree in theology and has done decades of work in social services. He's also involved in the Sierra Club — an anti-coal (and nearly everything else) bunch that isn't as radical as Greenpeace, but sure is close.
Marzian appears to have a nursing degree and has been involved in organizations such as National Organization for Women, which obviously makes her superbly qualified to craft firearm legislation.
Stein, an attorney who obviously missed some of her constitutional law classes, is involved with an organization called Americans United for Separation of Church & State, which seems fairly self-explanatory.

Together, they want to pass a law that would require the Kentucky State Police to come up with a licensing system for people who possess firearms and so-called assault weapons, along with a system to track the sales of firearms and ammunition.
Wayne, it was reported in the Lexington Herald-Leader, said the proposed law would "allow" the state police to issue a regulation that limits possession of firearms with "multiple rounds of ammunition."

Really, Mr. Wayne? You actually want to "allow" the state police to start issuing regulations? I'd remind you that regulations are your job if you weren't so obviously untrustworthy to create them without stomping on the Constitution.

Of course they're quick to point out that their proposals won't actually take away anyone's gun (yet) — for which I suppose those of us who legally own guns are supposed to be grateful.
Here's where most columnists would include the obvious, such as it's very doubtful criminals will hand-deliver a list of their firearms to the state police, or become overly worried how many rounds of ammo their guns hold, but I won't bore you with that.
Nor will I bore you with the fact that enacting these laws would be wildly expensive at a time when the legislature can't figure out what to do with the state pension and school systems are yammering for even more money.

Instead I will include contact information for these folks who, now that you've met them, sharing your views should be fairly easy.
Stein: Annex phone is 502-564-8100, ext. 608; work is 859-225-4269 or e-mail Kathy.Stein@lrc.ky.gov
Wayne: Annex phone is 502-564-8100, ext 616; work is 502-451-8262.
Marzian: Annex phone is 502-564-8100, ext 643 or e-mail MaryLou.Marzian@lrc.ky.gov.
Shoot them an e-mail or phone call and let them know if you agree, and see if they'll even bother to call or e-mail back.

When faith and news collide

This column doesn't usually tackle religion. But religion found me this week in an unusual place.

Meaghan Downs
Staff writer

The news.
First, the facts. I am a pastor's daughter.
As well as sister, daughter and sarcastic lackwit, I've also claimed the title of pastor's daughter for almost a decade now.
Therefore, I know a little bit (not a lot mind you) about how the religious sausage is made.
And everyone has an opinion about religion. Including pastor's daughters.
They say you shouldn't talk about faith or politics when you first meet strangers; both subjects are too volatile to navigate tactfully in the course of small talk conversations.
I've never been an expert at small talk, so I usually end up discussing politics and religion, and I like to listen to two people of opposing viewpoints slug it out.
I guess I'm a glutton for verbal punishment.
But when the Lutheran church recently found itself as the center of news stories broadcast by CNN, published by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and even summarized by The New York Times, I did a double take.
My church world was encroaching on my news world. And, for some reason, I did not like it; it was like the church pew hymnal and my reporter's notebook switched places in the night.
Without getting into the minutiae of our denomination's politics, the controversy was this: our church president decided to admonish a Lutheran pastor who allegedly participated in an interfaith vigil in Newtown, Conn.
The pastor in question leads a congregation in Newtown, the town where 20 children and six adults died in a mass

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'Christians' who responded to atheist's letter are atheists, too

To the editor:

I would like to respond to the letters addressing my piece that appeared in the Jan. 23 edition of The Anderson News.

Thanks very much to the Christian's response to my article about gun sense and extremists. I submit to the public my position concerning religious extremists is substantiated by the letters.

The religious right, through its own solipsism, ethnocentrism, fear and intimidation impedes democracy by authoritarian dominance and believe the so-called sinners should be dominated by the righteous.

The authors in true religious fashion have turned the intent away from the slaughter of 20 innocent lives in the attempt to meddle in what the French call "separation des l'Eglise et de l'Etat (the separation of church and state) by giving sermons.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan (1927-2003) said we are all entitled to our own opinion but not our own facts. All three letters contained opinions; however, mine had actual facts.

Following the thinking of author Stephen Roberts, all three of us are atheists. "I just believe in one less god than they do, and when they understand why they disbelieve in other gods, they will understand why I disbelieve in their god."

I prefer to be called a humanist. My concerns are with the human condition not some supernatural skyfather promising eternity in some heavenly church camp in the sky. We humanists exist in every arena of life. Secular Americans teach in your schools, drive cabs, treat ailments, write books and give to and direct charities. I challenge you to give me one instance of good that a Christian can do that a humanist can't.

It is interesting to note the writer who felt compelled to respond because of a friend. "The (gentleman) doth protest too much methinks." Could it be that friend (wink, wink, nod, nod) was an invisible skyfather? I have no need to blind anyone with science (fiction?) nor use my verbiage and rhetoric to impress anyone in a battle of wits. I do not do battle with the unarmed.

Thank you for explaining why your God could not save those innocent lives, or any others for that matter. My understanding is that your God is concerned with "free will" and the price of sparrows, yet unable or unwilling to intervene in the slaughter of innocent lives.

As to the reference to my intelligence, I, like Socrates, am intelligent enough to know the depth of my own ignorance. I strive to rise above it every day by discounting such follies as The Creation Museum and the soon-to-be-constructed Ark Encounter that should be an embarrassment to a Kentucky citizenry that ignore science and propitiate to the alters of ignorance.

Allow me to invite you to my Ark called the library. It is filled with wonderful books by or about Galileo Galilei, Sir Isaac Newton, Leonardo da Vinci, Richard Dawkins, Christopher Hitchens, Stephen Hawking and Carl Sagan who, in my opinion, has a convincing argument that humans are born of stardust.

And I promise the religious right if there is a heaven and I get the call, I will give your God every chance to explain the failures before I judge him/her.

But let's return to facts. Every day eight kids under 20 years old die from gun violence. That's 56 kids weekly, 340 monthly and over 3,000 kids a year according to John Rosenthal, founder of Stop Handgun Violence.

I reiterate: just use good common and gun sense. Our children's lives depend upon it.

Try sweet potatoes for vitamin rich meals

Sweet potatoes are one of my favorite foods. They are an excellent source of vitamins A and C.

When selecting sweet potatoes pick the small to medium size for flavor at the peak of perfection. Choose firm, dark, smooth sweet potatoes without wrinkles, bruises, sprouts or decay. Even if cut away, a decayed spot may have already caused the whole potato to take on an unpleasant flavor.

Keep sweet potatoes fresh by storing them in a dry, cool (55-60°F) place such as a cellar, pantry, or garage. Do not store them in the refrigerator, where they will develop a hard core and an "off" taste. If stored properly, sweet potatoes will keep for a month or longer. At normal room temperature, they should be used within a week of purchase. Brush off any excess dirt before storing, but don't wash until you are ready to cook them.

The moisture from washing will increase their spoilage.

Cook sweet potatoes whole whenever possible as most of the nutrients are next to the skin, and skins are easier to remove after they have been cooked. Pierce skin with a fork. Place potatoes in a pan and cook in an oven heated to 375°F for about 45 minutes or until tender. Cool potatoes slightly before removing skins.

Sweet potatoes can be cooked in a microwave oven to save time. Wash

For big plants in May, get tomato seeds now

OK, let's get the big news out of the way first. Don't worry, I'm still going to be here writing this column, I'm still going to open the vegetable stand from Memorial Day to Labor Day and I'm still going to be here on my wonderful farm. It's just that I'm leaving my job at the library.

Cheryl Steenerson
Columnist

I have a great new opportunity to work with a company that manages programs to serve developmentally disabled adults in Kentucky. I'm very excited. I get to work great hours with great people. So, the day after Valentine's Day will be my last working day at the library. From then on, you can call me at home or e-mail me with your gardening questions.

I will miss working at the library. I've been there, first part-time then full time, for over 13 years. Former director Jeff Sauer wanted me to start an after school program that helped kids with their homework back in 1999. It was a program that got great support and grew rapidly. It is that program, and those precious kids, that I will miss the most. OK, so I might miss teasing some folks at the counter and hearing those wild and wacky gardening stories.

Like I said, you can call me.

Now, we're halfway through February and if you want to have tomato plants that are well over 2 feet tall by May, then you need to gather your seeds. It isn't hard to start your garden from seed; and is digging a 20-foot ditch by hand.

Those of you who don't really garden, but want a tomato plant or two, can do it really easy. Get two Styrofoam cups. Poke a hole in each bottom with a pen. Fill them with damp potting soil. Plant a seed, just under the top of the soil, 1/4th of an inch. Sprinkle with water and place it on a little plate (a jar lid works great) in a warm, sunny location.

You can place plastic wrap over the top of the cup to help keep the heat in before the seed sprouts. The only hard part of starting seeds is the beginning. The seed planting depth must be right, the amount of heat and sun must be right. And the watering must be just enough to keep the soil damp, but not so much that you drown it. You can do this.

The seed library at the public library just got a big donation of seeds from Mt. Eden Green House. There is no cost to you. You just have to have a library card, watch a DVD at home to learn how to save seed, and then "borrow" the seeds that you want, vegetables, herbs or flowers.

At the end of the season, harvest the seed from your grown plants and return them to the library. We'll even provide the envelope. There is no penalty fee if you don't succeed. It's a great way to experiment just for fun.

The warm weather has brought out not just the wild onions and other spring plants, but the critters as well. I'm speaking specifically of our smelly friend, Pepe Le Pew. Every day I dodge a slow walker while driving to town, and every night I dodge those that walked too slow.

It's a stinky business all the way around.

Here is the shampoo recipe to use on dogs, if they have a too-close encounter. All of the ingredients are available at your local store. Combine 1 quart of 3 percent Hydrogen Peroxide, 1/4th cup of baking soda and 1 teaspoon of plain Joy liquid soap.

Wet the dog with water, then shampoo and leave the soap on them for five minutes before rinsing with water. I don't know if this stuff will work on cars but it's worth a try. Now get going on all those gardening chores. Spring has almost sprung and summer is close behind. My smile just keeps getting bigger.

Happy growing.

Closing the achievement gap, one sticky note at a time

Anderson County schools buckle down to break Top 10 of high-performing districts

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

Waking up at 5:45 a.m. one morning last week, Instructional Supervisor Sharon Jackman wanted to check one thing on her phone.

Anderson County test scores. Students just finished being tested using the Measures of Academic Progress exam or MAP, Jackman said, a test given three times a year that allows staff to track academic growth and predict performance, as best they can, on how students K-8 will score on state assessments like the Kentucky Performance Rating for Educational Progress (K-PREP) in the spring. “It seems reasonable that if they make growth there [on the MAP], we’re hoping that they will make growth on K-PREP,” Jackman said.

It may be February, but that doesn’t mean spring state assessments aren’t on the minds of Anderson County staff like Jackman.

Kentucky’s new school accountability model, Unbridled Learning, will be in its second year, and unlike last year’s trial run, scores be officially counted for districts this year.

“I believe if every one of our schools works hard to reach our yearly goals, we’ll be well on our way to meeting that Top 10 percent goal we’ve set,” Jackman said.

Goals for Anderson County include improving students’ college and career-readiness, plus the district’s graduation rate; improving achievement proficiency for math and reading across the district; and closing the achievement gap for low-achieving students by May 2013.

Last fall the Anderson County school district was ranked as “needs improvement” according to the new testing model, falling just below the top 30 percent of districts in the state.

Gap scores for minority, special education and free and reduced lunch students — especially in math, reading, language mechanics and social studies at the high school — were low.

Anderson County High School, the only school classified as a “focus school,” placed in the bottom 10 percent for its inability to close the achievement gap for low-performing students.

The ultimate goal? Breaking into the top 10 percent of all Kentucky public school districts for the 2012-2013 school year.

To do so, Jackman said, teachers in the district try to answer three questions through learning targets: “What do we want students to know? How will we know they met that objective? And what am I going to do if students didn’t learn it?”

“It’s vital, it’s absolutely vital,” Jackman said of the learning targets. “If we’re using those strategies, if we’re intentional in our curriculum, if we’re intentional in our assessments and if we’re intentional in answering when they didn’t learn it, we’re not only improving our proficiency score, but we’ve also closed the gap.”

This week in Pre-Algebra, math teacher Alex Hunter said, the students will be learning the learning target “I can construct a table given a function.”

Hunter now writes “I can” learning target statements on the whiteboard and on unit tests; they’ve been doing so in the math curriculum for the past two years, Hunter said.

And Hunter’s eighth graders no longer receive letter grades. They get learning target scores.

Math tests are scored based on how many questions within a certain learning target students got right. So instead of looking for a percent, students look for how many “3s” they received on a subgroup of three questions, Hunter said.

Photos by Meaghan Downs

Fifth grade math teacher Shannon Wells works with a student during a math lesson at Robert B. Turner Elementary on Monday morning. Wells said she uses sticky notes as ‘exit slips’ to make sure students understand the learning targets for that day’s lesson.

If they missed any math problems, eighth graders have the opportunity to submit a “testing analysis” for credit, reworking the problem and explaining why they believe they got it wrong in the first place.

Hunter and fellow math instructor Tom Cannon don’t feel as though including learning targets are forcing them to “teach to the test.”

Grading based on learning targets gives the tests more meaning than a percent average, Cannon said.

Hunter agreed, saying the tests give more direct feedback on individual topics.

“If we teach what we’re supposed to, then the test should take care of itself,” Hunter said.

In Shannon Wells’ classroom at Robert B. Turner Elementary, students scribbled on sticky notes with their answers on the differences between a rhombus and a square, a learning target for that day’s lesson on explaining the difference between quadrilaterals.

The sticky notes serve as “exit slips” that students hand to Wells so she can see which fifth graders understood a concept, and who did not.

“It’s like a little check up, ‘Did you get what I was teaching?’” she said.

Wells said she’s more confident this year on how her students will perform on the upcoming state tests.

After all, her fifth grade home-room did get a “super average” on the mid-year MAP exam.

“If anything, it’s helped me more,” Wells, a fifth grade math instructor, said of the learning targets. “It keeps me focused, it keeps them focused.”

Taxing districts, retirement system among short session items

The 2013 Regular Session of the Kentucky General Assembly is in full swing; the House of Representatives is considering several high profile topics during this short, 30-day session.

During each session, the Speaker of the House assigns the lowest House Bill numbers to bills addressing our most pressing issues. In this session, HB 1 calls for an audit of Kentucky’s special taxing districts across the state. Kentucky’s Auditor of Public Accounts worked with senators and representatives from both political parties to create an audit and reporting framework that will be posted on-line so Kentucky taxpayers will know where their hard-earned dollars are spent.

Kim King

Guest columnist

I co-sponsored HB 1 and participated in the official press conference and rollout last month.

Dividing Kentucky’s population evenly among 100 House members, also known as redistricting, still must be completed. According to the 2010 census, Kentucky experienced a severe population shift. Population greatly increased in Central Kentucky, while Eastern and Western Kentucky lost population.

Because the Kentucky Supreme Court ruled the 2012 redistricting plan unconstitutional, the House and Senate must finalize a legal plan soon.

Kentucky’s county Clerks need a sound plan so they can make necessary local adjustments.

Following a recent federal gun control debate, several pieces of legislation have been filed by the House Republican Caucus to protect your 2nd Amendment right to keep and bear arms. Visit the LRC.KY.gov website (Firearms & Weapons heading), or contact me for specific details.

The Tax Reform Task Force debated Kentucky’s antiquated tax code throughout 2012, but no plan was submitted for consideration during this session. Because this is a short session with many important and time-sensitive decisions to be made, any changes to Kentucky’s tax code will probably be made in a future session.

Our Kentucky Employee Retirement System (KERS) is in critical danger and must be preserved for the folks we made commitments to. One point everyone agrees on: We must honor the inviolable contract state government promised employees.

To date, Senate Bill 2 has passed out of the senate and waits to be heard in house committee. Currently, SB 2 calls for the actuarially required contribution (ARC) to be fully funded. This will cost an additional $330 million next year and even more the following year. SB 2 also calls for future hires to be placed in a hybrid investment account. Future public employees will enjoy a 4 percent guaranteed minimum return.

Because cost of living allowances were not part of the inviolable contract, SB 2 calls for these increases to cease until all of Kentucky’s Retirement System accounts are sound and secure.

When I speak with retirees in person, most agree cost of living allowances should be stopped to ensure the stability of their retirement funding. If or if they are resumed, SB 2 mandates they be pre-funded and not paid from the retirement fund.

I know these are painful measures. SB

2 should be heard in committee, and on the House floor soon.

I highly encourage you to participate in the 2013 regular Session of the Kentucky General Assembly. If you’d like to attend or schedule your child or grandchild as my page, or request House Gallery passes, please let me know.

shooting at Sandy Hook Elementary.

It’s surreal to read about your church body, especially the usually publically quiet Lutheran church, in the news. Discussed in the comments section online.

As a reporter, the endgame is to tell the story, not become the story.

If I had a chance to chisel that journalistic commandment in stone, I would.

Obviously, I was not the center of this particular story. Far from it.

But it begged the question: Can you have both religious faith and a sense of fairness as a journalist?

The answer? Yes, in my opinion.

I know it’s unrealistic to expect that faith and work won’t, at some point, intersect. That the background and experiences you possess as a person may affect how you approach subjects as a writer.

But I approach topics with a whole mess of background baggage: education, family structure, race, gender, and faith.

At the end of the day, I can only ask myself, and readers, if I’ve treated issues and subjects fairly and accurately.

And that’s a question I should be able to answer without any doubt.

In city council news, I’d like to commend city council member George Geoghegan for abstaining during a city council vote Monday night.

Abstaining doesn’t seem like a big deal to most, but Geoghegan’s action indicates that the new city council member is serious about his role on the city council, and other council members are taking notice.

During a routine board reappointment, Geoghegan spoke up and said he could not vote to reappoint members to boards such as the ethics committee, board of zoning adjustments and the economic development board.

Not because he didn’t approve of those people, but because he didn’t know the qualifications of about two-thirds of them.

He went on to say that he could not vote on the board reappointments if he didn’t have information about the candidates.

To be sure, most of the board members had already been serving for some time on the boards they were appointed to, as Mayor Edwinna Baker mentioned during the meeting.

But Geoghegan, who was elected to his position this past November, doesn’t have familiarity with the board appointees.

Later, after the other five city council members approved the board reappointments, Sandy Goodlett, Larry Giles and Ken Evans commented on Geoghegan’s vote, suggesting that perhaps his points are something that needed to be addressed.

Evans went on to recommend that the council receive its meeting packet — which includes documents, financial reports and ordinances discussed in the council’s monthly meeting — three days earlier to give council members time to review the packet’s contents.

Goodlett’s comment was particularly telling.

“Sometimes we’re asked to vote on things we don’t know absolutely anything about,” Goodlett said. “It’s a cold vote.”

Auditor: City government nets $148,000 profit in 2012

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

The city of Lawrenceburg received a positive “clean opinion” for its 2012 independent audit, according to Auditor Thomas Smith of Lawrenceburg accounting firm Farmer and Humble.

Smith presented the council with his findings during the council’s meeting on Monday night, stating that there were no incidences of non-compliance for the city during the last fiscal year.

The city even made a “net profit,” Smith said, of $148,049 in governmental funds revenue for 2012.

According to Anderson News reports on the city’s 2011 audit, the city’s net assets also increased by $93,537 last year, but spending was up by 11 percent.

Other financial highlights from the 2012 audit included a 3 percent increase in the unreserved General Fund balance for a total $2.18 million.

Mayor to apply for bulletproof vests for city police

Mayor Edwinna Baker will be applying for a grant through the Kentucky Office of Homeland Security for Law Enforcement Protection Program funds to purchase about 14 bulletproof vests for city police officers.

The city council unanimously voted 6-0 on a resolution giving the mayor authority to apply for the grant.

As part of the grant application process, the police department has to continue participate in the state’s gun-recycling program, Police Chief Chris Atkins said, in which guns forfeited from the courts are turned in to Kentucky state police for auction.

The city police department has been participating in the gun-recycling program for years, Atkins said.

City Clerk Robbie Hume said the mayor will be requesting $8,787 for bulletproof vests.

Business owner speaks out about downtown parking

Melissa Cinnamon, owner of Cinnamon’s Flower Shop, approached the council about receiving 30-minute parking signs by her business on the corner of Court and Main Streets.

Cinnamon, who said she bought the 100-year-old building at the corner of Court Street and South Main Street about a month ago, said she’s had significant problems with parking since opening her store in its new location.

Cinnamon presented the signatures of downtown merchants who supported her statements

She requested she receive three reserve parking signs: one for customers with disabilities, one for regular customer parking and one for herself.

Mayor Baker said she would refer Cinnamon’s request to a committee composed of Baker, public works committee members George Geoghegan and Bobby Durr, City Police Chief Chris Atkins and City Clerk Robbie Hume to examine the problem before the March council meeting.

Cinnamon also requested assistance with parking for the busiest day of the year for her business — Valentine’s Day on Thursday, Feb. 14.

Mayor Baker said she and the police chief, as well as Public Works Director Larry Hazlett, will try to work out a short time solution to Cinnamon’s parking issues before Thursday.

Board reappointments

The city council approved board reappointments 5-0, with new member George Geoghegan abstaining from the vote.

Geoghegan, elected to his position in November 2012, said he did not have enough information about the qualifications of the board appointees to vote on the matter.

The board reappointments are as follows:

For the ethics committee, Edwin McKee will serve until January 2015, and Jane Redman will serve until January 2016.

Frank Dorton, Donnie Hatchett, Victor Brown and Geneva Howard were reappointed to the Board of Zoning Adjustments.

Donnie Fint and Betty Webb were reappointed to Planning and Zoning, and both will serve until December 2016.

Anderson County Schools Superintendent Sheila Mitchell was reappointed to the EDA board until December 2014.

Chris Thompson was reappointed to the Historic District Commission until the end of his term in June 2015.

Annex, code enforcement board ordinances receive readings

The city council also approved the second readings of an ordinance to annex a portion of the city park, and to combine the code enforcement board and nuisance board.

About eight acres of the city park were not shown as being annexed by the city in official documents, and are now being officially annexed as part of a “clean up” for the Secretary of State’s office, according to news reports from the council’s January meeting.

After passing a second reading, the Code Enforcement Board will now be taking on the duties of the Nuisance Enforcement Board effective immediately.

This will allow a lien against a city property to take precedence over any other mortgage, with the exception of taxes, when enforcing the nuisance ordinance, according to Anderson News reports.

Child-tying suspects due back in court, prepare for trial

From staff reports

One of the more anticipated criminal trials in several years is scheduled to begin later this month for the three people charged with tying up a 3-year-old for up to 16 hours each day.

The trial is scheduled for Feb. 25-27, but a pretrial conference is scheduled for Tuesday at 9 a.m. in Anderson Circuit Court.

Charged in the case are the girl’s parents, Rebecca and Herbert Medley, along with her grandmother, Carolyn Case.

All three previously pleaded not guilty to the charge, which was brought against them last September following an investigation by the Kentucky State Police and social services.

The charge against them stems from a state police investigation during which Case reportedly told troopers that the 3-year-old was tied to her bed from 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. each day. She also acknowledged that the child was also tied to the bed for a two-hour nap, and spent an additional four hours tied up for discipline, according to the documents. She was also tied up to a booster seat in a kitchen chair for up to an hour a day.

The child was tied up with a curtain sash by lacing it through the arm holes in her shirt and behind her back.

It was then fastened to the bed using a large horse collar safety pin, according to court documents. The sash was also used to tie her to a kitchen chair.

Case, the grandmother, told investigating troopers with the Kentucky State Police that the girl “spent more time tied up than free.”

*From the time that you passed,
Time has stood still.
Many mornings I awake, and still can't believe it's real.*

*Your life was cut short,
Any only God knows why.
Even though you're in a better place,*

*It's still hard not to cry.
Your courage inspired us all
To always strive and fight.
You taught us to have faith,
Every morning, noon and night.*

*I just want you to know
That we all miss you dearly.
Each and every day we grieve,
Our hearts are broken severely.*

Remain in our hearts.
For that, my dear Jen,
We will never be apart.*

WHAT'S ON YOUR HEART?

Saffell Street teacher Teresa Miller, left, helps students Addie Miller, Deangela Robinson and Spring Evans with their construction paper hearts on Wednesday morning. The class has been learning about adjectives, Miller said, and the students were taping the hearts as part of a poster for the classroom door. It was also the 100th day of school, Miller said, so they had 100 hearts.

Shawn Rodriguez, a third grader in Teresa Miller's class at Saffell Street, said he chose the adjective 'enchanted' because it reminded him of 'magic.'

Olivia Reynolds places her heart on Teresa Miller's classroom door at Saffell Street Elementary.

15 YEARS AGO
Feb. 18, 1998

A Lexington car dealership dealt with the wrong couple when they sold Jane and Jim Chilton a defective car.

The Chiltons first noticed a paint run on the 1995 Chrysler Cirrus and then the engine light came on. Jim Chilton's mind started rolling and his wife said, "He wondered if maybe the car wasn't all that it was cracked up to be."

Especially since it wasn't even the car they had wanted. A month earlier, they were at the dealership when the Cirrus caught their eye, Jane Chilton said. They were interested in the show room model, but a salesman had them test-drive another car that was the same make and model.

The Chiltons returned to buy the showroom model, but were told it was sold and they would have to take the test car with 2,400 miles on it, Jane Chilton

SNOW SCULPTURE

It took Nathaniel Dennis about three hours to sculpt this huge snowman in front of his grandmother Alice McGaughey's yard on Carlton Drive back in February 1998 after a record snowfall. Some say it resembles cartoon character Homer Simpson. Nathaniel, then 13, is a son of Gloria and Johnny Dennis.

said. At the trial, dealership records revealed the showroom model was still available in May 1995 and wasn't sold for a few more months, Don Pisacanon, the Chilton's attorney said.

And it soon became apparent the test car wasn't new, Jane Chilton said. After the paint and engine light problems, mechanics found masking tape under the hood and spots with paint over spray. The dealership offered a replacement, but that car had some flaws as well.

Pisacano said the Chilton case was a "textbook bait-and-switch" — the dealer shows one car and sells another. But this salesman did it to the wrong couple, he said. Jane Chilton worked for the state justice cabinet, while Jim Chilton was a retired state police officer.

The dealership vacated its business location before the trial ended.

Why are Christians such bad restaurant tippers?

The headline caught my eye — “Why are Christians such bad tippers?” It was a story responding to something that recently went viral on the Internet when a restaurant server was fired after posting a copy of a customer’s credit card receipt online. Apparently, a pastor in St. Louis ate at an Applebee’s and when her bill came she scratched out the 18 percent gratuity that is often standard restaurant policy for large groups and wrote a big zero, adding, “I give God 10 percent, why do you get 18?” She signed it “Pastor Alois Bell.” I can’t begin to tell you how insanely furious that made me when I first heard about it, for a number of reasons. My youngest daughter has been a restaur-rant server for more than a decade, and she says church people are some of the worst customers. She says many — not all, but even one is too many — are whiny and demanding. They ask rude questions such as, “Why aren’t you in church?” if she’s working on a Sunday. (“Um, so I can wait on you?”) She said when she asked one customer if she’d like a glass of wine with her meal the woman sat upright and said, “Young lady, I’m a Christian and I don’t drink wine.” My daughter said she bit her tongue to keep from saying, “Jesus drank wine — are you saying you’re better than Jesus?” She said she also wanted to say, “Well, maybe if you did have some wine you wouldn’t be so mean.” Also, she said church people like to leave gospel tracts with their stingy tips — sometimes tracts that look like real money. I’d say unless you’re leaving a generous tip, don’t do that. What bothered me about the pastor’s comment on her bill — where do I even start? How about thinking her tithe of 10 percent absolves her from her duty to give to others? Many restaurant servers earn well below minimum wage and depend on tips to pay their rent and feed their families. How about her arrogance by calling herself “pastor” but not acting with humility, mercy and kindness? It turned out that after the Internet backlash the pastor apologized for the “lapse in my character and judgment,” as she told “The Smoking Gun.” She said she realized her comment on the receipt brought embarrassment to her church and her ministry. I’d add that it probably made God blush, except God knows that his people are sinful and he’s not at all surprised when we act sinfully. Still, if we want to call ourselves Christians, and if we want others to be attracted to Christ, we have to stop being so arrogant and obnoxious “in Jesus’ name.”

Still, if we want to call ourselves Christians, and if we want others to be attracted to Christ, we have to stop being so arrogant and obnoxious in Jesus’ name.

In the “Why are Christians such bad tippers?” story, the writer, Karen Prior, made an interesting point, that Christians are among the most sacrificially giving people and there must be something deeper than just stinginess going on when it comes to meager tipping. Prior suggested it has more to do with bad theology than bad manners. She said (and I agree) that many Christians divide the world into “secular” or “worldly” and “sacred” or “spiritual,” thus elevating what they consider to be spiritual and demonizing what they consider to be secular.

Therefore, giving to “God’s work” is considered good because it’s “spiritual” and using money on secular activities, such as eating out, is less good. Also in this line of thinking, certain occupations are “higher” (pastors), which makes others lesser (restaurant servers). I’m not a theologian, but I don’t think God uses the same separations as we do. I don’t think he considers giving our money to a Christian charity better than leaving a tip for a server who puts up with our bad manners. In fact, he might consider that even better.

The Bible tells those who call themselves Christ followers: “So whether you eat or drink or whatever you do, do it all for the glory of God. Do not cause anyone to stumble, whether Jews, Greeks or the church of God” (1 Corinthians 10:30-32). Maybe in God’s eyes everything we do is spiritual; everything we do, whether it’s in church or in a restaurant, reflects his name. Maybe if we remember that we wouldn’t turn so many off to Jesus.

Lawrenceburg sisters Lauren and Madison Wash have had plenty of thrills while competing in beauty pageants, but getting to meet the governor recently certainly ranks among the best.

The sisters received citations from the Kentucky House of Representatives in honor of their humanitarian work and met Gov. Steve Beshear and Lt. Gov. Abramson in the process.

"It was a pretty exciting day for them," said their mother, Adrienne Wash. "It was an honor to see the girls on the floor of the House and Senate."

Madison, 6, is a student at the Early Childhood Center. Lauren, 9, attends Emma B. Ward Elementary. Both are contestants in the America's Queens of the Commonwealth. Togeth-

Who knew they'd be this good?

Girls favored, boys in mix as tournaments start

We knew Anderson County's girls would be good and the boys could be good, but as good as 44-3 good?

Repeat that again. The Anderson County basketball teams entered the final week of the high school season with a combined record of 44 wins and three losses.

Since Anderson was formed in 1949, only one team, the 1971 boys' state runner-up team, has ended the season with fewer losses.

That team, led by Mr. Basketball, Jimmy Dan Conner, ended the regular season at 22-2, then won eight post-season games before falling to Louisville Male in the state championship game.

There have been other great teams with stellar records, such as the 1985 boys, who were 22-3 going into the post-season and finished 25-4.

To have both Anderson teams near or beyond those totals in the same season is almost unheard of. Suffice it to say it has been a pretty good winter around Lawrenceburg in 2013.

When the season started back in November, we knew the Anderson girls' team would be good. They were ranked in the pre-season Top 15 by the state's coaches and boasted two of the state's best juniors in Eriel McKee and Makenzie Cann.

We knew that McKee could be devastating in an open-court game and that Cann was drawing some interest from colleges playing at the highest level. We also knew the nucleus of a team that made the state tournament in 2010, when Cann and McKee were eighth-graders starting on the varsity, was still around. We knew this team had the makings of one that could possibly crack the state's Top 15.

But did we really know Anderson County would be ranked No. 2 in the state in nearly every poll? Did we have any idea they would be 25-1 going into Monday's game at Owen County?

Did we know the Lady Bearcats would not just beat teams, but would embarrass most opponents? Did we know they would have an average margin of victory just over 22 points a game? Did we know that they would be 3-0 against other members of the Top 10?

Raise your hand if you foresaw those things.

For what it's worth, this Anderson County girls' team is good. Very, very good. But it is not a lock to make the Sweet 16. More on that later.

As for the Bearcats, they were replacing four starters from a team that went 21-9 in 2011-12 and had little size. But at the same time, those who followed the Bearcats knew that the sophomore class was deemed to have good potential.

After 21 games, something around 14-7 and getting ready to play the spoiler's role in the Eighth Region might have been a good goal.

But 19-2? Considered a legitimate threat to win the Eighth Region? Let's just say that if you could have bet money on that in November, you would be sitting pretty today.

With all of the success Anderson coach Glen Drury has had (over 400 wins and two regional championships) at Anderson County, it seems odd to call Anderson basketball a surprise in 2013, but it is true.

No one, I mean, no one - except maybe the Bearcats themselves - saw this coming.

So with the real season starting with Tuesday's 30th District Tournament openers at Col-

Anderson County's Cody Dillow gets a reversal against Eugene Grace, of Fort Knox, in a 152-pound match of the Region 2 Wrestling Tournament. Even though Dillow had Grace on his back, Grace came back to win a close bout.

Four in, four just miss going to state

Wrestling team finishes fourth in regionals

By John Herndon

RADCLIFF - Anderson County's final trip through Region 2 of high school wrestling was a bittersweet experience. As a team, the Bearcats finished fourth, a strong showing considering they had lost 10 grapplers off the 2012 regional runner-up squad.

But only four Anderson wrestlers advanced to this week's state tournament, to be held Friday and Saturday in Alltech Arena at the Kentucky Horse Park in Lexington.

"I am disappointed overall but I am thrilled for the four guys that we have that made it to the state," Anderson coach Graham Carlton said.

Junior Cody Dillow (152 pounds) and senior Alex Swartz (160) placed third in the region while Gabe McMichael (182) and Crockett Cosby (285) both advanced to the state as fourth-place finishers. The top four in each weight class advance.

Anderson had four others - Jake Brown, Chris McDaniel, Austin Phillips and Tucker Pridemore - placing fifth. They could advance to the state if one of the four who finished above them at the regional tournament is unable to wrestle at the state.

"The fact that we had four guys get fifth place shows how close they were," Carlton said.

Making the state is a much different proposition for a wrestler today than when Carlton became Anderson County's first state qualifier in 2000. For years, there were only seven teams in the region, but with the sport being one of the fastest-growing at the high school level, there were 12 schools represented at last weekend's tournament.

"It is tough," Carlton said. "It's not just the number of teams in the region. The overall talent level is so much higher than it used to be. Kids are wrestling at a much earlier age. They start at the elementary and middle school levels and by the time they get here, they already have years of experience."

Experience paid off for Dillow, who will be making his first appearance at the state tournament. Down 4-1 to North Hardin's Tinker Reidling in the 152-pound consolation final, Dillow was

Cummins leads surging Bearcats past Owen

By John Herndon

OWENTON - It was more like a chapter test. A big chapter, an important one for sure.

But Anderson County's 62-50 win at Owen County wasn't a final exam last Thursday. Far from it.

Still, the Bearcats passed what was expected to be a stern late-season test with flying colors.

Austin Cummins scored 23 points and Ross Cox held his own with Owen's vaunted inside power, scoring 10 points and grabbing nine rebounds as the Bearcats put together their most impressive performance since whipping Eighth Region favorite Collins back on Jan. 4.

"I feel like that," said Anderson coach Glen Drury, who had devised a masterful game plan that propelled the Bearcats to their 18th win in 20 games. "I still feel like we are playing good basketball. People have been saying we are not playing the quality but that is no big deal."

What was a big deal was the Bearcats' ability to keep Owen's powerful tandem of 6-foot-6 Carson Williams and 6-5 Justin Shelton from being a huge deal. Or at least the Bearcats kept Owen's power game from domi-

Anderson County senior Libby Pike reacts with shocked laughter after a vase slipped through her hands during Senior Night festivities at Anderson County High School. Pike, however, saved her flowers and had a big night for the Lady Bearcats in her first varsity start.

Super Senior Night for Lady Bearcats

Pike has big night in first varsity start

By John Herndon

It had the makings of a difficult Senior Night.

Anderson County, ranked No. 2 in most of the statewide girls' basketball polls last week, was coming off a tough game the night before, was looking at a long-time rival who had been playing well and had to sort through the emotions that go along with the final game on the home court.

And it didn't look like it was going to get any better when one of those seniors dropped a vase, sending the remnants across one end of the floor at Anderson County High School.

Instead, that was about the only thing that went wrong for the Lady Bearcats in a 64-36 thrashing of Woodford County Friday night. And, just as the script called for, there was a big senior moment in store.

Libby Pike, who dropped the vase then broke out in embarrassed laughter, got the first start of her career, scoring eight points, including a game-ending put back that prompted the Anderson student section to erupt.

"I found out right before the game," said Pike, normally a backup center who has been playing in the Anderson program since middle school. "I was a bit nervous. It was a big crowd and we normally don't have big crowds like that."

Pike hit two free throws early to erase Woodford's only lead (5-3) of the night, then after Makenzie Cann

Swimmers place 11th out of 22 teams in regionals

By John Herndon
Sports editor

Anderson County swimmers continued to inch their way up through the Region 3 competition in the annual meet, hosted by Russell County High School on Saturday.

No Bearcat or Lady Bearcat came close to being the school's first entry at the state meet, yet the Anderson boys' team placed 11th out of the 22 teams that scored. Two Anderson relay teams, the 200-yard medley and the 200-yard freestyle, both made it to the championship race.

"I was very pleased with how my boys swam," Anderson coach Karla Williams said. "I do believe this was the highest amount of points scored by our boys. Even though we don't have many boys on our team, the ones that we have are very talented."

Anderson County's Casey Moninger competes in a meet earlier this year. He was part of two relay teams that made it to the regional finals last week.

The 200-yard medley team of Casey Moninger, James Mason, Cameron Peyton and Ben Spear came the closest to a state berth, finishing fifth in the region. Anderson's time of 1:58.22 was still nearly 13 seconds below regional champion Woodford County.

Only the top two finishers advance from the region to the state.

Mason was the only individual to advance to the championship race, placing seventh in the 500-yard freestyle.

Peyton advanced to Saturday's consolation races in the 50- and 100-yard freestyle while Mason advanced to the consolation round in the 100-yard breaststroke.

"James Mason and Cameron Peyton both made it back to finals in both of their individual events," Williams noted. "Ben Spear and Casey Moninger didn't make it back individually by they were both a valuable parts of both boys relays that scored extremely well."

Kylie Gehefer was the only individual girl to advance to Saturday, but placed ninth in the 100-yard breaststroke.

"Kylie just barely missed making it into the championship final, but she swam an absolutely amazing race in the 100 breast final," Williams said. "She started out her race a little slowly but finally turned on her speed when she raced ahead to beat all the other girls in her heat and dropped another .5 second off of her time."

"Amber Devine did an awesome job in her 100 backstroke in the prelims. She dropped several seconds off of her time."

Anderson's girls' 200-yard medley relay also advanced to the consolation final but was disqualified for a violation. The Anderson girls finished in a tie for 19th with Taylor County.

WRESTLING

able to make a move and score a pin midway through the second period.

"I feel like I wrestled pretty good," Dillow said. "I feel like I could have gotten to the finals."

That trip was derailed, however, but Eugene Grace, of Fort Knox, in the second round. Grace scored a 12-9 win, one that Dillow will carry around in the "What if?" department.

"I had him on his back a couple of times," Dillow said. "I should have gotten the best of that. I got close to sticking him a couple of times. I should have."

Swartz dominated his third-place match but also faltered in the second round, dropping an 8-7 decision to Dallin Tritapoe of Boyle County. Swartz recovered for two more wins, putting John Hardin's Patrick McDonald on the mat late in the third period. Swartz was leading 5-0 at the time of his pin.

"I wish I had done a little better," Swartz said. "I had not planned on going for third place."

However, Swartz figures to be in the hunt for a medal at the state, his second trip to the final weekend of wrestling.

"Last year was my first year of wrestling at the state and I was nervous," he said. "Nerves got the best of me last year in the first match last year. I won a consolation match before I was eliminated. It is all different at the state."

Last weekend, Anderson got a tough break on Friday night when Taylor Logsdon (145 pounds) suffered a concussion in his first round match against Noah Conley of Boyle County. After being checked out by an on-site trainer, it was determined that Logsdon would not be allowed to continue, in accordance with Kentucky High School Athletic Association rules. Logsdon had been expected to advance to the state. "He was seeded fourth," Carlton sighed.

Saturday marked the end of Anderson's competition in Region 2, where perennial power LaRue County has dominated over the last decade and Central Hardin, North Hardin and John Hardin all have strong programs. Under a new alignment next year, Anderson will compete in Region 5, which will be home to several Eighth Region basketball and baseball foes but will also have Woodford County and the Franklin County schools.

"It will be tougher," Carlton says. Woodford has long been the most-dominant name in Kentucky wrestling with 13 state championships and South Oldham won the state in 2003. Both are still perennial powers and Oldham County and Franklin County have been strong at times. But that is next year.

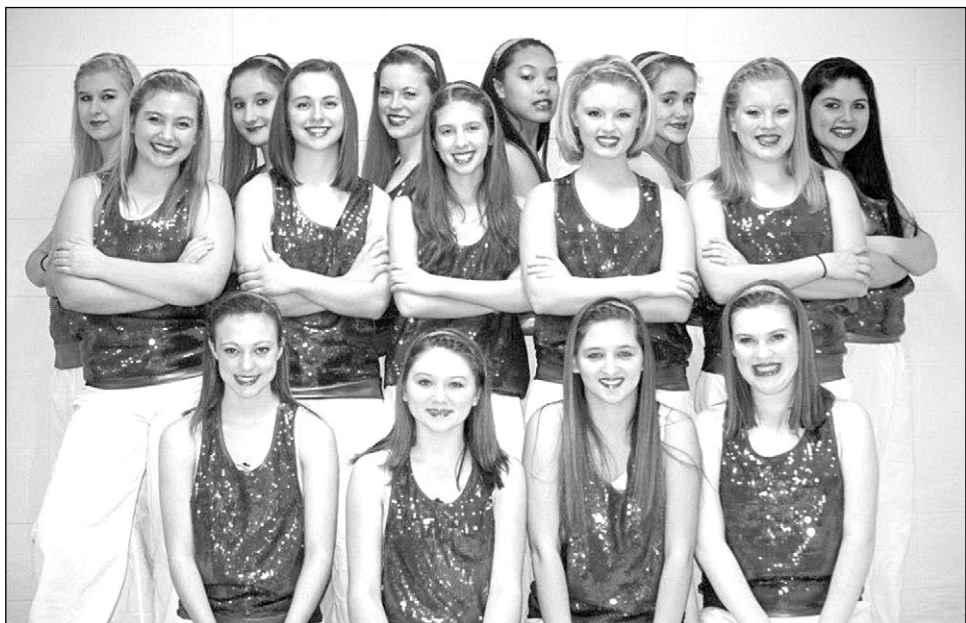

In 2013, however, Carlton believes his four qualifiers can advance at the state, but there are no predictions. "It is a a random draw. It is a lot of luck of the random draw," he said.

Public meeting set on proposal to allow larger pontoon boats on Guist Creek Lake

From staff reports

The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources will conduct a public meeting Feb. 25 in Shelbyville to discuss a proposal to allow larger pontoon boats on Guist Creek Lake in Shelby County.

Department officials are considering a change in regulations that would increase the maximum length of pontoon boats on the lake from 22 feet to 24 feet.

Several boat owners would be affected by this change.

The meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. at the Stratton Community Center in downtown Shelbyville, located at 215 Washington St.

Collins, Lady Bearcats still tops as postseason begins

By John Herndon
Sports editor

The madness known as high school district and regional tournaments will get under way around the state on Monday, Feb. 18. Anderson News sports editor John Herndon has been ranking the Eighth Region teams for the last month. Here is his final analysis of an incredibly wide-open race for the boys' Eighth Region title and what looks like a three-team slugfest for the girls' big trophy.

BOYS' EIGHTH REGION

1. Collins

Why the Titans will be in Rupp: Collins is easily the most talented team in the region. Long and athletic, the Titans can alter shots, as they did last week when they allowed Woodford County just two field goals in the second half. Collins also owns the deepest bench in the region. Why the Titans won't make it: The Titans are streaky offensively, capable of putting points on the board in bunches, but also susceptible to long scoring droughts. Collins might be the best team but the margin is not as significant as past regional favorites.

2. South Oldham

Why the Dragons will be in Rupp: Good shooters, extremely smart basketball team. Veteran coach Steve Simpson, one of the best around, is just due. Why the Dragons won't make it: Size is a problem, other than 6-foot-4 Jack Sherry. Teams that rely heavily on the outside shot traditionally have a difficult time winning a one-and-done tournament.

3. Grant County

Why the Braves will be in Rupp: Junior guard Tyler Carr is legit. Surprise factor, in that few know much about Grant, a team that has been down for some time. With the school's best record in a decade, Grant is oozing with confidence.

Why the Braves won't make it: Even though Grant has beaten Simon Kenton twice, schedule's ability to prepare the Braves for the regional tournament is suspect.

4. Anderson County

Why the Bearcats will be in Rupp: Veteran coach Glen Drury might be putting together his best coaching job yet. The Bearcats have no superstars, but play extremely well together and are incredibly confident heading into the post-season. They have a deep bench.

Why the Bearcats won't make it: Mother Nature has not blessed the Bearcats with great talent or size, even though there are several good high school players. Even though they are getting better at it, the Bearcats have shown a maddening penchant for letting beaten teams off the hook.

5. Simon Kenton

Why the Pioneers will be in Rupp: Simon Kenton is known for tough, physical defense. Andrew Sampson can score. One of the region's largest schools, Simon Kenton has not made it out of the Eighth since coming in during the 2006 season. It is just time.

Why the Pioneers won't make it: Grant has shown Simon Kenton is not even a lock to win the 32nd District, as many assumed. A bunch of good players, but no great ones.

6. North Oldham

Why the Mustangs will be in Rupp: A very dangerous team that has been underrated all season. Guard David Levitch, a Louisville commit, might be the best offensive player in the region.

Why the Mustangs won't make it: Have some puzzling losses to go with some major wins. Do the Mustangs have enough weapons to go with Levitch?

7. Oldham County

Why the Colonels will be in Rupp: Experience. Oldham has it. Two straight regional championships count for something. Lots of very good players hardened by tough schedule.

Why the Colonels won't make it: No "bell cow" player that can put the team on his shoulders, if needed.

8. Owen County

Why the Rebels will be in Rupp: Owen has the best pure post player in the region in freshman Carson Williams. Owen's starting lineup has no glaring weaknesses. Devin Duvall has become one of the best coaches around.

Why the Rebels won't make it: Depth is a major problem. As Anderson showed last week, Owen has trouble guarding a smaller, quicker team.

Best first-round district games

29th: North Oldham at Oldham County: A regional contender will go down early. North Oldham won the first meeting by 13 points.

30th: Anderson County vs. Shelby County at Collins: Anderson has lost just twice this year, but one was to Shelby County. While Anderson was up by 18 points in that one, Shelby does give Anderson some major matchup problems.

GIRLS

1. Anderson County

Why the Lady Bearcats will be at Diddle: Anderson has the best one-two punch in the region with Makenzie Cann and Eriel McKee (or is it McKee and Cann?) Has played a rugged schedule, is 3-0 in games against last week's state Top 10 and has beaten at least three other regional favorites. Coach Tony Kays might have put together his best season yet.

Why the Lady Bearcats won't make it:

While the bench is deep, there is not much size there. It's a one-and-done tournament.

Great teams sometimes have bad games.

2. Simon Kenton

Why the Pioneers will be at Diddle: Tenacious defense and one of the best coaches around in Jeff Stowers. Abby Owings is the region's best true point guard. Simon Kenton's size gives Anderson some match-up problems.

Why the Pioneers won't make it: Simon Kenton is a legitimate Top 15 team but Anderson is a Top 3 team.

3. Walton-Verona

Why the Bearcats will be at Diddle: Two-time defending champs know what it takes to navigate the tournaments. Forward Courtney Sandlin, the pre-season pick as the region's top player, is reportedly back from an injury.

Why the Bearcats won't make it: Guard play is not quite as strong as Anderson's or Simon Kenton's.

4. Gallatin County

Why the Wildcats will be at Diddle: The Dossett sisters, Hannah and Brooke, can fill the nets from anywhere. Gallatin is very dangerous and could upset one of the Top 3.

Why the Wildcats won't make it: Not enough firepower to go with the Dossetts.

5. Owen County

Why the Rebels will be at Diddle: Veteran team that plays well together.

Why the Rebels won't make it: Anderson, Simon Kenton and Walton-Verona are just much better.

Best first round games

None of the regional contenders should be in any trouble in the first round of the districts.

Bearcats warm up after sluggish start, blow past Berea

By John Herndon
Sports editor

It took Anderson County eight minutes to get warmed up, but when the Bearcats finally did, they played the part of the hottest team in the Eighth Region. Anderson won its seventh straight game and the 17th in 18 decisions with a 73-46 romp past the visiting Pirates in the second game of a double-header last Friday night. The game might not have been even that close.

Anderson improved to 19-2 on the year.

After a first quarter that saw Anderson only leading 12-10, the Bearcats erupted with a 31-10 outburst in the second frame to lead 43-20 at the break. The lead reached its apex at 62-30 early in the fourth quarter before both teams started freely substituting.

"What I was proud of is that after a sluggish first quarter, we picked our energy level up," Drury said. "We got to playing like we need to play."

Drury was glad the game was well under control by halftime, but he shuffled his lineup often in the second half, keeping the game from getting to the running clock, or "mercy rule" threshold of a 35-point lead.

Senior Jay Smith led all scorers with 18 points while Austin Cummins and Christian Estes scored 12 and 10, respectively. Smith also pulled down 10 rebounds for the Bearcats, who held a 47-26 advantage on the backboards.

Every player that suited up saw action.

Bearcats hope for repeat performance of romp at Henry

By John Herndon
Sports editor

NEW CASTLE - Anderson County can only hope for a repeat performance on the basketball court at Henry County High School in two weeks.

For years, Bearcat coach Glen Drury has wanted a game in the Henry gym, one that has an old fieldhouse look and a spacious shooting background at one end. And, as it has every year since 1963, the Henry gym will host the Eighth Region Tournament from Feb. 25-March 2.

Performances like the Bearcats put together at Henry last Tuesday night would give the Bearcats a fighting chance at playing in Rupp Arena for the Sweet 16 the following week.

The Bearcats used a stifling defense to knock Henry County down, then followed with a barrage of fourth quarter 3-point shots to knock the Wildcats out, 70-54.

It was a fourth-quarter flurry from guards Austin Cummins and Christian Estes that turned things into a rout. While Anderson was firmly in control, leading 31-18 at the half and 48-35 after three quarters, Estes and Cummins each hit a pair 3-pointers in 110 seconds to push the Anderson lead to 60-35.

The lead topped out at 66-40 after another bomb from Estes and of Anderson's 22 points in the final frame, 21 came from beyond the arc. Cummins, who led Anderson with 20 points, hit three in the fourth quarter to go along with his trio of triples in the third quarter too.

Estes scored 19 points while Jay Smith and Luke Mann each tallied 11.

"It was a barrage of threes," Drury noted. "It went from an 11-point lead to 25 just like that. When you are hitting threes, it does that. But the three is a double-edged sword. You can't let it be the only weapon you have."

Last Tuesday, Anderson had many weapons. Mann repeatedly powered his way to baskets in the lane while Ross Cox and Austin Linzy were able to battle Henry's twin towers of Derek Jeffries and Austin Young to a virtual standoff on the boards as Anderson won the rebounding battle 25-18.

Anderson struggled early, trailing 10-9 after a quarter, but took the lead for good when Smith swished a three to make it 14-11 at the 7:13 mark of the second quarter.

The Bearcats turned up the defensive heat to force numerous second quarter turnovers when they outscored Henry 22-8. For the game, Henry coughed the ball up 21 times, many leading to easy Anderson baskets.

Last Tuesday, Anderson put together the kind of performance that it will need every night when the district tournament starts next week. The Bearcats outrebounded a bigger team and forced 21 errors.

"Your deep runs are determined by your rebounds, taking care of the basketball and your defense," Drury said. "They are the common denominators to deep runs."

BOYS

nating.

Williams, a freshman who might be the Eighth Region's top college prospect, scored 24 points, but 11 of them came in the first quarter. He also snared 13 rebounds. Shelton scored just six points.

"We missed 22 shots in the paint," Owen coach Devin Duvall lamented. His team dropped to 18-7 and lost for the fourth time in five games.

Anderson also held its own on the boards, with Owen holding just a 29-28 advantage.

Most of all, Cumming and fellow guards Christian Estes and Jay Smith were able to finish drives with Williams and Shelton being forced away from the basket.

"We are not very big and we are not extremely strong," Drury noted. "But we play well together, we handle the ball well and we defend.

"We had to get Carson Williams and Shelton out on the floor. If we hadn't gotten them out on the floor, we would have not been able to finish. They are too big, too strong. They are too good. We feel fortunate to come away with a win tonight."

The turning point undoubtedly came in the first five minutes of the second half when the Bearcats turned a 30-28 halftime lead into a 42-31 advantage. Forcing Owen out of its zone, Anderson drove through open lanes to the basket. "We made their big kids tired," Drury noted.

"They did a good job spring the floor and spreading us out and using some clock," Duvall added.

The Bearcats might have surprised Owen with tenacious backcourt pressure that forced the Rebels into 16 turnovers while Anderson committed just five. Repeatedly, Estes or Cummins forced errors, then released for easy baskets.

"We had a hard time getting back in transition when we turned it over," Duvall said. "They are a little bit quicker athletes."

Cummins also nailed four 3-pointers

Anderson expanded its lead to 44-32 - the 12-point margin that Anderson attained four times was the game's largest - but Owen pulled with 44-37 by the end of the third frame. That's when Anderson got a huge play that made only a small mark in the box score but a huge dent in Owen's psyche.

Reserve Kyle Sutherland drove the baseline but suddenly found himself surrounded near the basket. The senior eyed Luke Mann alone, then slipped him a quick pass for a layup 15 seconds into the fourth quarter. Less than a minute later, Mann scored in the lane again. Owen was never closer than eight again.

"He drove in there and threw it to Luke and we got a layup out of that," Drury said. "That was huge."

It was not lost on Drury that even though his team prevailed last week, a subsequent matchup in the Eighth Region tournament could turn out differently.

"They are a team that could win the region," Drury said of Owen, the region's All-A Classic winner. "They are skilled players and are very well-coached.

"I am proud of our kids. Nobody predicted us to be 18-2.

"We are good enough to beat anybody but anybody is good enough to beat us too."

It was a test that Anderson passed with a high score last Thursday night.

Bearcats, Lady Bearcats close regular season at Franklin

By John Herndon
Sports editor

The Anderson County boys' and girls' basketball teams will close out the regular season Friday, Feb. 15 when they travel to Franklin County for a double-header. The girls' game is set to get under way at 6 p.m. with the boys tipping off in the first game.

The girls' game follows at 8 p.m.

"This is a good game at the end of the season because it is a tournament atmosphere," says Anderson boys' coach Glen Drury.

It is a true rivalry.

Anderson swept last year's games with a 41-point rout in the girls' game but then pulling out a 64-63 win in the boys' contest when the now-graduated Spencer Ruggles drilled a 3-pointer with 9.4 seconds to play.

Over the last 11 times the teams have played, however, Franklin holds a 6-5 lead in both the girls' and boys' series. Anderson will be favored to even that Friday night.

The Franklin boys were 7-14 heading into the final week of the season. After last year, coach Scott Chalk moved to Dunbar and Ryan Timmons, the mega-gifted star, elected not to play his senior year. While Timmons is listed on the Franklin roster, he has not notched statistics this year.

Another starter, Logan Woodside, also elected to forego his senior season to concentrate on football. He has already enrolled at the University of Toledo.

Tommy Johnson is in his first year coaching the Flyers.

"They are down but they still have some nice players," Drury noted.

Rylan Rowe and Lorenzo McCaskell lead Franklin with 16 and 12 points a game respectively.

On the girls' side, Anderson has already routed Franklin once this year, 58-25 in the championship game of the Franklin tournament back on Dec. 29.

Since that game, however, the young Lady Flyers are 10-3. They put a major scare into Madison Central, one of the 11th Region favorites, and boasted a 20-8 record heading into the final week.

"They have a really young team but they are coming along," Anderson girls' coach Tony Kays said. "I can guarantee you it won't be as easy as the first time we played them."

Freshman Dasia Kilbourne leads Franklin, scoring 10.6 points a game.

Girls' game at Owen story online

The Anderson County girls' basketball game at Owen County Monday night ended too late to be included in this week's Anderson News.

A report will be posted online at www.theandersonnews.com and will also appear in the Feb. 20 edition of the paper.

Project to prospect

Hard work, enthusiasm fuel Whiteside's transformation

By John Herndon
Sports editor

Not many who saw Kali Whiteside play basketball as an eighth-grader could have foreseen her becoming much of a factor for the Anderson County girls' basketball team.

They saw someone who had little feel for the game and an odd-looking shot. But if they looked closely, they also saw someone blessed with height and pure athleticism.

Now, Whiteside has blossomed into one of those vital players if Anderson County is to make a run at the Sweet 16 and hang around if they get there. Simply put, the 6-foot-1 senior is one of the top defensive centers around.

"You hope," Anderson County coach Tony Kays said of that 2008-09 season when Whiteside took up basketball for the second time. "You see a great-looking athlete and you think you have some time. It took some baby steps but she has developed into being a very good player for us."

Whiteside's role is simple: Patrol the paint, swat opponents' shots and rebound. On a team that already boasts prolific scorers in Makenzie Cann and Eriel McKee, anything Whiteside contributes offensively is gravy.

"She has gotten to the point where she is looking to take that shot around the basket," Kays says. "She is getting squared up and using the backboard like we have repped her on."

Whiteside, who plans to play the game beyond high school, worked countless hours with Kays and assistant coaches Clay Birdwhistell and Nick Cann to become a solid post player who has drawn the interest of several small college basketball programs.

"I have definitely come a long way," Whiteside says. "It has had to do a lot with the people around me helping me. My coaches and my teammates have played a big part of my development."

It is not unusual to see opposing players take a tumble when battling Whiteside for a rebound. "She is just so physically strong," Kays noted.

But there was a time where Whiteside's athletic future appeared to be on the soccer field. It comes as no surprise that she was a goalie and might have had a bright future in the sport.

Basketball? Whiteside was not impressed. "I played one year in the recreation league and I didn't like basketball at all. But then in the eighth grade, I said, 'OK, I am going to try it,'" she said.

"It was something new to try but it was also the people around me. They were all so nice. They just invited me into a group."

Anderson girls hoops has been counting its blessings ever since.

The articulate Whiteside is active in the FFA as a member of the agricultural issues team at school. "We went to talk to (state representative) Kim King about the issues in the agricultural industry right now," she said.

"One of the big things right now is industrial hemp. The Commissioner of Agriculture (James Comer) is going to try to get it passed so we can grow it. It will help the textile industry build our economy."

Whiteside approached the task with the same enthusiasm she shows when ripping a rebound off the backboard or sending an opponent's shot in the other direction.

Whiteside, wants to become an elementary school teacher, but also hopes to keep basketball, the sport she once eschewed, on her agenda. "I want to keep it in my life because it is something I love and enjoy," she says. "I want to be sure to maintain that."

Lady Cats hold off Christian Academy

From staff reports

Ever since Anderson County's only loss of the girls' basketball season, to Bryan Station back on Dec. 22, there have been questions if the Lady Bearcats could close the deal in a close game against a very good team.

The questions were legitimate. After all, the Lady Bearcats have been pummeling the opposition by more than 22 points a game and have had only two other contests - wins over Bishop Brossart and Mercer County - that ended with a margin of fewer than 10 points.

The Lady Bearcats answered Thursday night, even though they were shaky at times in doing so, with a 66-64 win at Christian Academy of Louisville.

"The good thing is we didn't start out great, but we got in the groove to get a good win," Anderson coach Tony Kays said.

Makenzie Cann led Anderson with 23 points, but it was University of Louisville signee China Dow of Christian Academy who put her team on her strong shoulders and nearly pulled the upset.

Dow scored 35 points, the most by an individual player against the Lady Bearcats all season, but it was not enough as Anderson improved to 24-1.

Eriel McKee followed Cann with 21 points for Anderson.

Christian Academy, ranked fifth in the rugged Seventh Region, but knocking at the door of the state's Top 20 - the Lady Centurions were ranked 21st in last week's Litkenhous Ratings - rallied from a 38-28 halftime deficit but could never quite catch the Lady Bearcats.

Anderson led 61-56 with less than two minutes to play, then hung on.

"I think in the fourth quarter, we ran out of some steam for some reason," Kays said. "Then they threw a press at us. It was not a great press, but we were not attacking it like we should be.

"Part of that is my fault because we have not paid a lot of attention to presses. We have not seen them much because teams don't usually try to press us, so it was a good thing for our team."

Kays was asked, given Anderson's struggles against the Lady Centurion press, if he might see more of that in the post-season. "I think some teams will try it if they need to but I don't think they will look at as their main method to stop Anderson County, but I am sure we will see it."

drilled a 3-pointer, Pike drew a charge on Woodford's Chelsey Ford that set up another long-range bomb from Alex Avritt.

The rout was on as the Lady Bearcats recorded their 17th straight win and moved to 25-1 on the season.

"Libby is just a great kid all-around," said Anderson coach Tony Kays. "The student body loves her and a lot of students came out tonight to support her and Kali (Whiteside). Libby is great in the locker room and she just does everything right. She stays positive. She doesn't play a lot of minutes, but she is valuable because she can come in and play defense and get rebounds. She is capable of putting the ball in the basket."

Which is what the entire Lady Bearcat team was adept at doing Friday night. The Lady Bearcats hit 22-of-48 shots (45.8 percent), including seven bombs from 3-point land.

"We shot the ball well tonight, but we were taking good shots," Kays said.

After Avritt's 3-pointer, Cann scored on a put-back midway and Woodford was never within seven the rest of the way. Cann led Anderson with 26 points, hitting five 3-pointers, one of which was from beyond NBA range. Eriel McKee followed with 13 points.

The final basket marked Anderson's longest lead of the night and it was Pike, who had been serenaded by "We Want Libby" chants from the student section, picking it up too. "I was actually just trying to draw a foul, then it went in," Pike smiled.

Whiteside, Anderson's other senior, had become a full-time starter as a senior and is widely recognized as one of the top defensive centers around. Whiteside scored five points and pulled in six rebounds but her true on-the-court value could be seen when Woodford drivers often pulled up and passed to a teammate.

"Kali is just so physically strong," Kays noted. "Her defense was good. Her rebounding. She was active out there tonight. ... When she is active and getting those rebounds, she is a new dimension for our team."

Friday, Anderson was clicking in every dimension against a Woodford team that had won three of its last four, including a victory over a very good Lafayette team. The Yellow Jackets had also routed Scott County by 42 points just three weeks before, but stood at just 15-13 after Friday's game.

Anderson led 18-8 after eight minutes and 37-18 at the half.

In other words, there were no worries on Senior Night.

"You are always a little bit worried coming off a tough road game like we had last night (at Christian Academy of Louisville)," Kays said.

"Christian Academy extended us emotionally and physically. I was real anxious to see how the kids would come out with the energy level and all that, but the kids answered the bell. They came out and were ready to go."

lins High School, where do the teams stand?

As for the Lady Bearcats, the district should be theirs for the fifth straight year. Of the district opponents, Collins might be able to stay close to the Lady Bearcats for a while, but really, Anderson should roll.

The Eighth Region? That is a different story. As good as Anderson's girls are, it would be a mistake to see them as a lock to get back to Bowling Green. At least two teams - Simon Kenton and a healthy Walton-Verona - have the firepower to end the Lady Bearcat dream.

Still, Anderson is certainly capable of getting back to Bowling Green and doing major damage once it gets there.

As for the boys, who really knows? And that is not a knock on Anderson.

It is an acknowledgement that the Eighth Region might be the most wide open I have ever seen. At least nine teams might think they have a legitimate shot and they are right.

Consider the 30th District, Anderson's home. The Bearcats beat Collins, which beat Spencer County, which beat Shelby County, which beat Anderson. Round and round it goes.

As for Anderson, the Bearcats could be playing the Region 2 champ in Rupp Arena on March 6 or they could see their season end next Tuesday against Shelby County. It really is that wide open.

"Collins has the most talent and the most athletic ability," Drury said last week. "But there are 14 teams out there that could beat the No. 2 or No. 3 team."

Owen County coach Devin Duvall, whose team was the region's All-A champ but who lost to Eminence early in the year, agreed.

"When you get to the districts this year, there really is no favorite."

"South Oldham is really good, but they play Trimble County in their first game. Trimble has had a good season," Drury said. "That won't be an easy game."

Chances are there will be few easy games when Monday rolls around and the district tournaments starts.

It will be starting on Feb. 18, but both Anderson County teams should be in the thick of March Madness, 2013.

MASTER COMMISSIONER'S SALE

In order to comply with the orders of the Anderson Circuit Court, the Master Commissioner will sell the property described in the following actions on Thursday, February 28, 2013, at 11:00 a.m. in the Anderson County Courthouse, Lawrenceburg, Kentucky. The property shall be sold to raise the amounts herein-after set forth, together with interest and the costs of this action, and upon the following terms and conditions (unless otherwise indicated):

(1) At the time of the sale, the successful bidder shall either pay cash or make a deposit of ten percent (10%) of the purchase price, with the balance on credit for thirty (30) days. In the event the successful bidder elects to credit the balance, he or she will be required to post bond and furnish surety acceptable to the Master Commissioner. The bond shall be for the unpaid purchase price and bear interest at the rate of twelve percent (12%) per annum until paid in full.

(2) PLEASE NOTE: The real estate SHALL BE SOLD SUBJECT TO ALL city, state, county, and school real estate taxes, whether current or delinquent.

(3) Easements, restrictions, stipulations and agreements of record in the Anderson County Clerk's Office. Assessments for public improvements levied against the property, any facts which an inspection of the property may disclose and any and all planning and zoning regulations imposed upon the subject property.

(4) Where the real estate has insurable improvements, the successful bidder shall, at his or her own expense, carry fire and extended coverage insurance on said improvements from the date of sale until the purchase price is fully paid, to the extent of the Court appraised value of said improvements or the unpaid balance of the purchase price, whichever is less, at a minimum, with a loss clause payable to the Master Commissioner or the appropriate Plaintiff. Failure of the successful bidder to effect such insurance shall not affect the validity of the sale or the successful bidder's liability thereunder, but shall entitle, but not require, the Plaintiff(s) to effect said insurance and furnish the policy or evidence thereof to the Master Commissioner, if it so desires, and the premium thereon or the property portion thereof shall be charged to the successful bidder as the cost.

(5) The property shall otherwise be sold free and clear of any right, title and interest of all parties to the action and of their liens and encumbrances thereon excepting easements and restrictions of record in the Anderson County Clerk's Office, and such right of redemption which may exist in favor of the United States of America or the Defendant(s), and any matters disclosed by an accurate survey and inspection of the property.
